himself—to govern himself in wisdom, to govern himself in righteousness, "to establish," in the words of our Constitution, "justice" in the land—that justice which secures to every man his right, that justice which is the attribute of the God of nations, which dwelt with Him before the worlds were, which will abide with Him when worlds perish, and by which we shall be judged for this day's proceedings.

My countrymen, you hold in your hands, in the words of the fathers of the Republic, the greatest trust ever hands, in the words of the fathers of the Republic, the greatest trust ever committed to a political society. Let us prove ourselves equal to the great trust, and for the sake of a common humanity in the present, and for the sake of a common humanity in the great hereafter, let that trust suffer no detriment at our hands. [Cheering and continued applause.] 31At the conclusion of Mr. Biugham's remarks calls were made for Hon. Wm.

E. Stevenson, but that gentleman responding said that as it was late, and the audience perhaps weary, and inas much as he was announced to speak ask them to excuse him for this evening from attempting any elaborate or lengthy remarks. Mr. Stevenson referred, in connection with the presence of Mr. Bingham, to the eminent ser-vices rendered our people by him in his capacity as a member of the House speaker said he knew how to value also paid a handsome and grateful compliment to Hon, Schuyler Colfax Representatives voted against our admission and every Republican but two voted for it, said there be no doubt about where the friends of West Virginia are to be found. Mr. Stevenson continued some fifteen or twenty minutes in a happy vein, in a discursive sort of way, making some telling hits and bringing down the house with rousing cheers.

was called for, but that gentleman exexcused himself on account of the lateness of the hour, but said he should be happy to speak somewhat at length it
